With Outline, Giacomo Moor has created an elegantly functional, freestanding system of wooden cabinets and shelves contrasted with an iron support structure that can be placed against a wall or in the center of a space. The unusual round attachment recesses in the shelves and the cabinets break the linearity of the design and allow the components to be inserted by preference, easily sliding them in and out of place when rearranging. The visual contrast between the dimensions of the cabinets and shelves, and the lightness of the structure, unites the contemporary visual impact with that of a handmade cabinet.
